

abstract

The concepts of common security and cooperative security have included the idea of politics of meaning and the need for getting closer of perceiving among actors. Cooperation could be developed by why of transforming threats in to dialog, transparent security policy and minimizing aggressive acts. The paper examines the development of the concepts in the context of ASEAN. The analysis comes to the conclusions that it is a positive measure that Indonesia calls on ASEAN to improve cooperation under Asean Security Community (ASC), and it is at the same time undeniable that there acxist some negative attitude towards Indonesia taking the lead in this issue.
